HALAL POSTAGE STAMPS SET TO GO ON SALE SOON

$10,000 CERTIFICATION FEE TO BE COVERED BY SLIGHT INCREASE IN POSTAGE

Dry Gulch, Wed. November 12, 2014

The head of the postal service, Ahmed Kharr has released plans to have postage stamps certified as Halal.

In a move seen as 'not quite Kosher' to some, the postal service head insists that this is a necessary step if the postal service is to survive.

Mr. Kharr also reminded his critics that by moving away from self adhesive postage stamps and going back to licking stamps, as was done in years gone by, the cost of these stamps would cost less to produce.

Halal certification would protect those who may accidentally eat the stamps from eating something that is not Halal.

Trials of the new stamps will commence at Lakemba next month.

AUSTRALIAN PM TINY RABBIT FRONTS UP TO RUSSIAN PRESIDENT, VLADIMIR PUDDING

The Australian Prime Minister, Mr. Tiny Rabbit has reportedly fronted up to Russian President, Vladimir Pudding, but without a shirt in sight except for what he was wearing.

Mr. Rabbit was seen entering Mr. Pudding's room shortly after the Russian leader's arrival in Brisbane last night.

After 5 minutes, Mr. Rabbit was then seen leaving Mr. Pudding's room, with what looked like tears running down his face. He was being helped by staff as he appeared unable to walk un-assisted.

Mr. Rabbit photographed leaving Vladimir Pudding's room last night.

Reports are emerging that an unidentified person, possibly someone of high ranking within the Russian government, had given Mr. Rabbit the Russian version of a 'Shirtfront', better known out here as a giant 'wedgie'.

Mr. Rabbit's condition is currently unknown, although he has been seen using a wheel chair with a large, soft cushion as a seat.

DID YOU KNOW?

The famous gunfight at the O.K. Corral only lasted about thirty seconds.

Mattie Earp, Wyatt Earp's second wife, who was with him in Tombstone during the O.K. Corral gunfight committed suicide with an overdose of laudanum on July 3, 1888 in Pinal, Arizona. She was despondent because Earp had left her for another woman.

Belle Starr, the "Outlaw Queen," a horse thief, outlaw and part-time prostitute was the first woman to be tried for a serious crime by Judge Isaac Parker. She was sentenced to five months in prison for horse theft. In 1889 she was shot in the back and killed by an unknown assailant.

Wild Bill Hickok was killed by an alcoholic drifter named Jack McCall while playing poker in a saloon in Deadwood, South Dakota, on August 2, 1876. When he was killed he was holding a poker hand of aces and eights, thereafter known as the Dead Man's Hand.

Take care of those pesky varmints, 4 legs or 2. The results are always the same. Satisfying!

Australia Post donates boss Ahmed Fahour's $2m bonus to Islamic Museum of Australia

Ellen Whinnett Herald Sun
June 18, 2014 10:40AM

AUSTRALIA Post donated more than $2 million to an Islamic museum in suburban Melbourne in lieu of a bonus it was due to pay its chief executive, Ahmed Fahour. The Herald Sun can reveal Mr Fahour asked for the bonus to be donated directly to the Islamic Museum of Australia, of which he is patron. The donation was made months ago, but has only emerged now, when Australia Post is sacking 900 staff to stem the losses at its domestic mail division.

Mr Fahour said he and his family had been able to make a "substantial contribution" to several not-for-profit organisations in recent years. "Earlier this year, I announced that my family had contributed $4 million to the Islamic Museum. We have also made contributions to a number of other community causes such as schools, sporting clubs and the arts," he said. The Herald Sun understands the bonus formed part of the $4.8 million salary that Mr Fahour was paid in the 2012-2013 financial year. The donation - expected to be declared in Australia Post's financial report later this year - raised eyebrows within the organisation, with a source questioning the size of the bonus and the fact it was donated to a charity closely linked to Mr Fahour's family.

But another source said the donation was a private one, and that Mr Fahour was an "incredibly generous man. A display of Islamic art on surf boards at the Islamic Museum of Australia in Thornbury. Opened in Thornbury in March by federal Treasurer Joe Hockey, the Islamic Museum of Australia showcases the heritage and culture of Australian Muslims, through art, architecture, food and installations. It was inspired by the personal journey of Mr Fahour's parents, who migrated to Australia from Lebanon in 1969, becoming successful business people and raising eight children, who also have successful careers. The founder and director of the museum is former Macquarie Bank executive Moustafa Fahour - Ahmed Fahour's brother.

Moustafa's wife, Maysaa, is the chairwoman and director. The Fahours' sister, MasterChef participant Samira El Khafir, is head chef and manages the cafe on site. Last Saturday, Mr Fahour, a director of Carlton Football Club, won a car in a raffle for the club's 150th anniversary. He immediately handed it over for auction, where it raised $40,000, to be spent on a program which helps children from ethnic backgrounds with health and education.

Byron Bay Cookies cops racist abuse for "disrespectful" halal-certified Anzac biscuits

Monday, 20 October 2014 1:02
Broede Carmody

A gourmet biscuit manufacturer in New South Wales has received significant social media backlash after seeking halal certification for its products. Byron Bay Cookies, which turns over around $13 million a year, recently received a barrage of angry comments on its Facebook page for producing halal-certified Anzac biscuits. One Facebook commentator lashed out at the business, saying: "What a disgrace. Halal certified Anzac biscuits?!!

Seriously how disrespectful!!!" Another person wrote: "Shame on you. Don't insult our boys by sending Halal certified Anzac biscuits overseas."

SmartCompany contacted Byron Bay Cookies this morning. However, the business did not want to comment and is seeking legal advice. It is understood the business has come under fire from a small but well-orchestrated anti-halal campaign for the past six to eight months. A Facebook page called Boycott Halal in Australia, which has called for people to boycott Byron Bay Cookies, has more than 18,000 likes.

It is understood a range of other businesses and products have also come under fire from the anti-halal group, including Cadbury chocolate and Coopers beer.

Halal Certification Schemes

Grand Mufti Dr Mustafa Ceric: To Conquer the World through Halal Movement

Halal food by itself is not of concern. Nearly all food is naturally halal (permissible under Islamic sharia law) and observant Muslims can make food of unknown origin halal by pronouncing 'bismillah' over their meal. What is of concern is the recent invention of halal certification schemes.

To fully understand how these schemes work, why we should object and what you and your family can do about them, please watch the following video produced in conjunction with HalalChoices.com.au.

Tony Abbott discusses MH17 with Vladimir Putin at APEC; Kremlin says Russian president was not 'shirtfronted'

"...Mr Abbott held a 15-minute private meeting with Mr Putin on the sidelines of the APEC summit in Beijing, with the Kremlin confirming "the catastrophe of the Malaysian airliner was the main topic of discussion". Asked if Mr Abbott managed to "shirtfront" the Russian leader over the issue, Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov said: "It appears that he did not try."...."
