DRY GULCH PAIR CHARMED BY Mt. VICTORIAN BEAUTIES

The Kokoda Kid and The Texas Terror pay a visit to the historic Mt. Victoria Museum and spend an afternoon to be remembered

November 8, 2008 - Mt. Victoria.

It was a cool, brisk afternoon when the Kokoda Kid and the TX Terror arrived in the sleepy little mountain town of Mount Victoria.

It was their first ever visit in the area and it was intended to be a short stay. This soon changed when they decided to drop into the local Mount Victoria & District Historical Societies museum.

It was like stepping into another world. Actually, it was stepping into another world. A world from romantic days gone by.

The best part is that not only are the exhibits real and sitting right in front of those visiting, but many were items that were used by the early settlers in the area and its surrounding districts.

Of course, the visit would not have been so enjoyable if it had not been for Jean, Molly and Jean. These three lovely ladies were the most charming company and they had the Kid and TX talking about them for days afterwards.

The pair plan to return to the area as soon as they're able, even if it's just to say hello to those lovely ladies again

Of course, anyone interested in a little of our history and enjoying a day out, this is the place to visit.

The museum is at the old Mount Victoria railway station, in what was originally the station's dining room, so it's just a matter of taking a train to Mount Victoria right to the museum's doorstep.

Driving is also worth it for the scenery. There's good parking at the station as well. There's a small fee to get in. ($3 for adults, 50 cents for kids). Opening hours are Saturday, Sunday, public and school holidays 2pm to 5pm.

An old printing press from the museum very similar to the one used by Dry Gulch Gazette's opponent, the Snake Gully Sentinel.

The Kokoda Kid & his leading lady, the notorious Texas Terror, were among the visitors to Mt. Victoria on November 9th, 2008. Also in the area that day were a number of Rolls Royce motor carriages. The Kokoda Kid is seen standing beside one of the carriages in the picture above.

Take care of those pesky varmints, 4 legs or 2. The results are always the same. Satisfying!

DID YOU KNOW?

- 1- Buffalo bones, which were strewn across the Great Plains after the mass buffalo hunts of 1870-1883, were bought by Eastern firms for the production of fertilizer and bone china. "Bone pickers" earned eight dollars a ton for the bones.
- 2- Around 1541, the present state of Texas was called Tejas, a Spanish version of the Caddo word meaning "allies."
- 3- Rumor has it that the tradition of spreading saw dust on the floors of bars and saloons started in Deadwood, South Dakota due to the amount of gold dust that would fall on the floor. The saw dust was used to hide the fallen gold dust and was swept up at the end of the night.
- 4- After serving more than twenty years in prison, Cole Younger got a job selling tombstones, worked for a while in a Wild West show with Frank James, and died quietly in 1916 in Lee's Summit, Missouri where he was known as an elderly churchgoer.
